Help patients rebound by giving blood

In March, while basketball teams are fighting for the chance to be crowned champions, patients battling cancer and other illnesses are fighting for their lives. The American Red Cross is asking blood donors to help patients rebound by making a lifesaving donation this spring.

Middle school basketball player Olivia Stoy received blood and platelet transfusions during treatment for T lymphoblastic lymphoma. With the help of blood and platelet donations, the 14-year-old has returned to the basketball court and, more importantly, beat cancer.

"We are so thankful that the blood products were available to Olivia for the almost two years of her treatment. They have made it possible for Olivia to regain her strength and get back to doing the activities she loves," said Megan Stoy, Olivia's mother.

Donors of all blood types are needed to help ensure that the Red Cross can collect more than 13,000 blood and platelet donations needed every day for patients like Olivia.

Giving blood takes less time than it takes to watch a single basketball game. Make an appointment to donate blood by downloading the free Red Cross Blood Donor App, visiting redcrossblood.org or calling 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767).

UPCOMING BLOOD DONATION OPPORTUNITY:

Gutwein's bill adding SMA, SCID to newborn screenings heads to governor

The Senate voted unanimously on Feb. 27 in favor of State Rep. Douglas Gutwein's (R-Francesville) bill that could save the lives of more children by adding two tests to Indiana's mandatory newborn screening panel.

Gutwein's legislation would require spinal muscular atrophy, or SMA, and severe combined immunodeficiency, or SCID, to be added to the list of screenings newborns receive in Indiana shortly after their births.

"This legislation will alter the lives of babies born with these diseases," Gutwein said. "Without the requirement to test for these two additional diseases, children could show symptoms too late and lifesaving treatments may not be as effective. When detected at birth, these children can be given a fighting chance at a healthier life."

Spinal muscular atrophy is a severe genetic disorder that alters the motor nerve cells in the spinal cord. Those cells, once affected by SMA, will not regenerate, which then results in muscle weakness and can eventually lead to the inability to walk, talk, swallow and breathe.

Gutwein said out of the four types of SMA, the most severe and common is usually diagnosed within the first few months of an infant's life. He said children who received treatment for SMA through a new FDA-approved drug therapy were able to achieve unprecedented motor milestones.

Severe combined immunodeficiency makes those affected highly susceptible to life-threatening infections caused by viruses, bacteria and fungi. SCID is often referred to as "bubble boy disease" due to the level of quarantine necessary to avoid infection. The syndrome usually results in the onset of one or more serious infections within the first few months of life, making detection at birth key. These infections are usually serious, and may be life threatening, including pneumonia, meningitis or bloodstream infections.

Children affected by SCID can also become ill from live viruses present in some vaccines. Gutwein said this syndrome makes it nearly impossible for a child to live a healthy life if it is not detected at birth.

According to CureSMA.org, approximately one in 11,000 babies are diagnosed with SMA. SCID affects approximately one in 500,000 births, according to the Indiana State Department of Health.

Gutwein said newborn screenings identify diseases in babies shortly after their births, providing opportunities for early interventions that can prevent death or the need for long-term care. In Indiana, newborns are already tested for 47 conditions, including sickle cell anemia, cystic fibrosis, hearing loss and critical congenital heart disease.

House Enrolled Act 1017 can now be considered by the governor. For more information, visit iga.in.gov.

Gutwein (R-Francesville) represents House District 16, which includes all of Pulaski County and portions of Fulton, Jasper, Newton and Starke counties.
