HERE'S WHAT YOU MISSED in this week's PULASKI COUNTY JOURNAL

Collaboration makes computer accessible to those who are filing unemployment

Amber L. Tomlinson

A collaboration between three entities has made filing for unemployment one step easier for Pulaski County residents who may not have access to a computer.

The Pulaski County Public Library team has been looking for ways to better assist individuals who don't have access to a computer or the internet but are needing to file for unemployment. The idea of what can be done has changed and evolved during the last six weeks but the end result has always been the same — helping others.

Pulaski County Public Library Executive Director MacKenzie Ledley said the idea began as COVID-19 hit and people were seeking help. Ledley said the call center volume at Workforce Development increased and additional access to computers and the internet was needed.

"So until their capacity could meet the volume of calls we were trying to figure out how local people could get internet access to file their unemployment," Ledley said.

She used the example that in 2008, during the recession, the library provided extra computers for those who didn't have access to file for unemployment.

Not only does the stay at home order cause restrictions of people not being able to access the library but the library is also under construction.

"That really takes our facility out as an option for the services. So our team was trying to find a way that we could provide the computer and a local solution," Ledley said.

As the idea grew, Ledley reached out to Micah Sabcec, who is a legislative assistant for Sen. Charbonneau. She is also a Pulaski County native. One of the first ideas was that library staff could help people input their data. After some research it was discovered that wasn't a viable option.

"So then we talked about having a cart outside of the library that people could just up and use, but with our construction that wasn't really an option," Ledley said.

A computer is available for residents to file for unemployment through a collaboration that was started by the Pulaski County Public Library.

She then began to talk with Pulaski County Community Development Commission Executive Director Nathan P. Origer about locations in the county where the computer could be placed. Origer suggested the town municipal building where his office is located and that he would be willing to help.

"We have a reservation system set up so that if people need to use the computer for unemployment purposes they can call the library and set up a reservation and then they can use the computer," Ledley said.

The computer is in a cabinet/cart that secures the screen and system but allows access to the keyboard.

Ledley said the collaboration includes the Town of Winamac providing the electricity and internet, Origer being in charge of moving the computer and the library taking reservations.

Ledley said once an appointment is made, the library has a checklist they will give the person who is filing for unemployment. The list will help expedite the filing process.

"This isn't a public internet terminal," Ledley said. "This computer is specifically for people filing for unemployment benefits."

There is still extended WiFi in the library parking lot but it appears that people are having a hard time applying for unemployment on their phones.

The library is encouraging people to use hygiene safety by using hand sanitizer before and after using the computer.

Anyone who's interested in using the computer to file for unemployment must first contact the library to schedule an appointment. The computer is not available for those who want to randomly use the internet and an appointment must be made.

For more information call the library at 574-946-3432.

Positive Working Environment

What do you enjoy about Pulaski County?
I have lived all my life in Monterey, IN. I have 2 grown children and 5 grandchildren who also live in Pulaski County. We have chosen to reside in this county because we believe it is a great place to raise a family and we enjoy all that it has to offer.
Why have you chosen to run for commissioner?
I have chosen to run for commissioner because as a business owner, I see how Pulaski County has provided me many opportunities. I now have the time and skills needed to be able to give back to the community so that others can continue to have their opportunities to succeed.
Working together to make a difference for today & tomorrow
